An Expert lecture was organized in which Dr Ishita Kapoor; Speech and language pathologist from Max Hospital provided her insight for the work Max hospital is doing for the welfare of Autistic people. She said that they are developing tool for diagnosis of autism. She explained that although autism comes with deficiencies in communication, learning capability, and behaviors, it manifests differently among individuals. Autistic people can vary significantly regarding abilities - some might have verbal fluency, while others may possess an above-average IQ or even independent living skills. On the other hand, others could display serious conduct issues which impinge upon their empowerment and need reasonable accommodation or additional assistance across all areas of life. Furthermore, some autistic individuals ordeal discrimination owing to unreasonable societal expectations, actively aiming to marginalize them. She further assured that she and her team members are readily available for welfare of Special need students. She answered all the queries raised by the audience.

Dr Ishita Kapoor ; Sppech Language Pathologist from Max Hospital delivering her lecture

The second expert from Max Super Specialty hospital was Dr Suneet Kaur Malhotra; Obstetrics and gynecologist in which she explained that the Neurodiversity community carries a broader definition than just autistic persons; it includes those with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Tourette Syndrome, depression, dyslexia, intellectual disabilities and schizophrenia. These people who identify themselves as neurodiverse are referred to as 'neurodivergent'.

The purpose of Neurodiversity Advocacy is to effectively integrate Neurodivergent persons into society and guarantee their right to be accepted for who they are rather than seeing autism as an affliction. She said that it is very important that early identification is done so that appropriate measures could be taken for treating autistic population and mainstreaming them . Thereafter an interactive session was kept for the students and parents . The session was quite fruitful for everyone present.
